Language: English Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Two Men: A Romance of Sussex Old Beau-nez shouldered out into the sea, immense, immovable, as when the North-men, tossing off him in their long-boats, had first named him a thousand years before. Like a lion asleep athwart the doors of light, his head massive upon his paws, his flanks smooth as marble, he rested. The sea broke petulantly and in vain against the boulders that strewed his feet. He lay squandered in the sunshine that filled the hollows in his back and declared the lines of his ribs gaunt beneath the pelt. Overhead larks poured down rivulets of song from the brimming bowl of heaven. The long-drawn swish of the sea, a sonorous under-current that came and went in rhythmical monotone, rose from the foot of the cliff to meet the silvery rain of sound and mingle with it in deep and mysterious harmony. It was May. The sides of the coombes were covered with cloth of gold: for the gorse was in glory, and filled the air with heavy fragrance; while the turf, sweet with thyme, was bejewelled with a myriad variety of tiny flowers. In earth and sea and sky there was a universal murmuring content, as though after labour, enduring for aeons, the Mother of Time had at last brought forth her Son and, as she nursed him, crooned her thankfulness.
