He renewed the contract for the third year, 1875-76, and had the pleasure of paying out a bonus of 6,250 marks. But the harvest of 1876-77 was so poor that it did not even meet the preliminary allowance for rent. The employees realized the situation, and showed no discontent at the failure to receive a bonus. The good effects of participation showed themselves with increasing force during each new year, as the laborers were gradually educated up to it: their zeal and carefulness multiplied notably. In 1875-76 the harvest on this largest farm in Zealand was gathered eight days earlier than on most of the small farms in the neighborhood. This unprecedented result, of the highest importance, showed the exceptional activity and perseverance of the whole body of workpeople. The following incident tends the same way. One day, writes Baron ZytphenAdeler, they were sowing rye. When, at half past seven in the evening, I found the people hard at work, I remarked that anyhow they would not succeed in finishing that day the two and a half acres still remaining to be sown. But the workmen answered with one accord that it must be done, and it was done! Herr J. Neumann, proprietor of an estate in Posegnick, East Prussia, with two connected farms, instituted participation on one of his holdings in 1854. He gradually extended the system to his other farms, and since 1866 these have...
