Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Excursions: In Northern British Columbia and Yukon Territory and Along the North Pacific Coast The journey along the North Pacific Coast from Vancouver to Prince Rupert is made by ocean steamer. The distance is about 500 miles(804 km.), and the time occupied usually about 36 hours. The journey is continuous, no stops being made; and as much of the coastline is passed in the night, only a brief general description is necessary. Physical Features of the Coast. The route from Vancouver northward along the Pacific Coast follows a long, partially submerged, island-filled depression, bordered continuously on the east by the Coast range and interruptedly on the west by the long mountain ridges of Vancouver and the Queen Charlotte islands. The Coast range is a deeply dissected granitic ridge usually from 60 to 80 miles (96 to 128 km.) in width. It rises directly from the sea with few intervening flats or plateaus to height of 4,000 to 5,000 feet (1,219 to 1,524 m.), gradually increasing towards the axis of the range to 7,000 or 8,000...
